An interesting passage from the book. A Manual of Psychological Medicine, published in England in 1879 by John Charles Bucknill and Daniel Hack Tuke, lists the "Exciting or Determining Causes of Insanity" which are divided into Moral and Physical categories. This list provides the reasons, upon admission, why people were admitted to mental hospitals in England.

This book is, in effect, a condensed textbook of psychiatry. It was written in Britain at the height of the war, at a time when the problems of psychiatry for civilian and soldier alike were sharply focused. The author explicitly states that its purpose was to provide for the needs of the civilian...
