I believe that Honeywell has restarted production of the KFC 225. I wonder if the new ones have the same part number for the servos ? Yes; a press release went out a while ago saying that (a copy is in my writeup). It was a dud, AFAICT. ... (think of the SR22 in Zurich where a failed alternator got the pilot to panic), they are in deep shit.

Today I've discovered that once the kfc-225 is in level flight and holding altitude, it doesn't use the gray code data from the encoding altimeter - it uses its own internal encoding air pressure sensor. This rules out the altimeter problem, and narrows it down to the computer unit, or very few other things like the input from the
