Older gliders (most excluded from EASA regulation as non-EASA types) are known as Vintage gliders. Despite some examples originating from the early part of the 20 th century, these aren't museum exhibits - the gliders are maintained in an airworthy condition and flown alongside any other type of glider. Vintage gliding is a significant element of the wider international gliding community and welcomes anyone who has an interest in preserving, flying or just being around historic gliders.

Glider is a 1947, Model 35. From the TCT Classifieds: 1949 Glider: This is a single axle 20' Glider Travel Trailer. She looks and feels like a 1940s Pullman Car. It was previously restored by Vintage-Vacations and was sitting in a garage for three years till I bought it last year. It is in better then showroom condition.
